INDIVIDUALIZED ATTENTION

During individual therapy, a person's thoughts, feelings and behavior are explored with the guidance of a trained therapist. Stairways Outpatient Clinic therapists use a holistic approach to mental health treatment, offering alternative therapies in addition to traditional, evidence-based treatments for serious mental illnesses, anxiety, depression, postpartum depression and trauma, among a wider variety of mental and emotional difficulties. These services all take place in an atmosphere of respect, support and encouragement.

Stairways Outpatient Clinic has assembled some of the finest, well-trained counselors available, who listen, understand and guide. They offer a safe and private space, where individuals are free to discuss problems, concerns, fears and challenges.

Individual therapy is an effective treatment method, especially when used in conjunction with group therapy, medication management and other healthy lifestyle changes.

*"They took me in,
got me the help and therapy I needed,
and got me back on my feet."*

THE GROUP THERAPY EXPERIENCE: LEARNING ABOUT SELF AMONG OTHERS

Studies suggest the group therapy experience is a very effective approach to improving one's overall quality of life. Due to the nature of the group experience, individuals may find groups to be even more beneficial than individual therapy sessions. They offer a safe environment for developing skills, learning how to deal with psychological disorders or improving the quality of interpersonal relationships. Hearing how others cope with their challenges can offer great insight into solving one's own challenges.

Stairways offers a variety of groups to assist individuals with their day-to-day challenges. All groups are guided by staff who are knowledgeable and concerned about the growth of each group member.

The outpatient clinic periodically revises group offerings based on individuals' needs and requests. A list of current groups offered at the Stairways Outpatient Clinic is available at the clinic.
